

The biological basis for learning

The brain learns by building and stabilizing neural connections ("myelination")

If learning involves building connected neural networks, how might we make many connections? Use more of the brain!

Practice & study using a variety of approaches.

